

Celeste Warren is Vice President, Global Diversity and Inclusion Center of Excellence. As the leader for Merck's Global Diversity and Inclusion Center of Excellence, she is responsible for working with Merck's global leaders to advance and embed diversity and inclusion as a strategic approach to maximize business performance and create a competitive advantage.

Ms. Warren joined Merck in 1997 and has held numerous positions of increasing responsibility within its global organization.

Prior to joining Merck in 1997, Celeste worked for nine years in Human Resources at Kraft Foods, Inc. and General Foods.

She has been honored with many awards, including Black Enterprise's "Top Executives in Global Diversity and Inclusion", Savoy Magazine's "Most Influential Women in Corporate America", "21 Leaders for the 21st Century" and Diversity Global's "Influential Women in Global Diversity."

Celeste serves on the Boards of RWJBarnabas and All In Together, and is a member of the CNBC Workforce Executive Council and World50 Inclusion & Diversity Impact Community.

Celeste attended the University of Kentucky where she earned her B.S. degree. She received her Masters Degree from Carnegie Mellon University.

She is the wife of John Warren and the mother of two children, Christina-Celeste and John Steven, Jr.